

CLIENT TRANSFORMATION

FROM CROSSROADS TO LEGACY COMMAND

Client: Jason P., Senior Naval Officer

Engagement: Multi-year 1:1 Executive Coaching

Focus: Leadership identity, legacy alignment, high-stakes decision-making

Client Profile: Commodore, U.S. Navy | 25+ yrs in service | Oversaw 6,000+ personnel and operations | Now U.S. Navy liaison to Australia for nuclear submarine operations

“THIS ROLE WASN’T EVEN ON THE RADAR UNTIL I STOPPED CHASING WHAT I WAS SUPPOSED TO WANT AND STARTED GETTING CLEAR ON WHAT ACTUALLY MATTERED.”

THE CHALLENGE

When Jason came to coaching, he was a decorated Naval officer at a crossroads, uncertain whether to stay the course toward Admiral or transition to civilian life.

Despite an exceptional track record, he felt emotionally disconnected, overextended, and unsure whether future promotions would deliver the legacy or meaning he truly wanted. He was also navigating immense pressure from work and family, with little space to consider what he actually wanted next.

He didn’t need help with performance; he needed help reconnecting with purpose.

COACHING APPROACH

Over the course of our work together, we focused on helping Jason clarify who he wanted to be beyond rank—and how to lead with both impact and integrity. Our work centered around:

- Reclaiming a personal sense of agency and identity as a leader
- Exploring what legacy and service really meant to him
- Navigating complex Naval politics and decision timelines with clarity
- Strengthening executive presence and team culture during his time as Commodore
- Weighing the tradeoffs between civilian vs. military paths
- Aligning leadership with personal fulfillment—not just external advancement

The goal wasn’t just career clarity—it was helping Jason design the final chapter of his military service with meaning and intention.

THE TRANSFORMATION

By the end of our coaching engagement, Jason had:

Stepped fully into Commodore leadership, leading all submarine operations out of Norfolk, VA with renewed confidence and clarity

Reclaimed a sense of internal authority, shifting from obligation to ownership

Chose to veer from a long-assumed path in favor of deeper alignment

Accepted a new post in Australia, helping shape nuclear strategy as the U.S. Navy’s top liaison

Reconnected with his sense of joy, creativity, and long-range vision

Built a legacy not just of service, but of intention

Most importantly, Jason left coaching with more than a new title—he left with a new internal compass.

level*42
CONSULTING

“Coaching gave me the clarity to choose a future I actually wanted—not just the one I was groomed for.”